DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Applicant's election without traverse of Group I, Species I-a, II-d, in Paper No. 06/03/2004 is acknowledged.

Claim Objections

2. Claims 5 and 6 are objected to because of the following informalities: "the supporting structure" is recited in line 1, but it should be "securing structure" to follow with the language set forth in claim 1. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

- (b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.
- (e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.
- 3. Claims 1 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by US Patent No. 5,894,843 to Benetti et al.

Benetti discloses a device in Figure 1 that can be connected to a retractor (column 7, line 64). The device includes a manipulator (1) that contacts an organ, a support shaft (3), and a securing structure (15). Benetti explains that the shaft is secured to the retractor by a ball joint (column 8, lines 22-34). A ball joint includes a ball, or "key member", coupled to the shaft that is received by a socket in the securing structure (15), and the rotation of the shaft is restricted by the key member engaging a latch (14) in the socket. The manipulator (1) can be shaped to contact the heart (column 7, line 11).

4. Claims 1-3,8,9, 24, and 26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by US Patent No. 6,506,149 to Peng et al.

Peng illustrates a retractor in Figure 30 that includes an organ manipulating device (150), a support shaft (153), a key member (164) coupled to the support shaft, and a securing structure (165) with a socket. Peng explains that the socket includes a latch that engages the key member (164) to prevent movement of the shaft (153) relative to the securing structure (165) (column 22, lines 5-18). The support shaft (153) is flexible and comprises a vacuum tube (column 9, lines 13-14). Peng explains that the cup (151) is adapted for holding a heart (column 21, line 6).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

- (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 5. Claims 4-7,10,11,25,27,30, and 31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Peng in view of US Patent No. 6,355,028 to Castaneda et al.

Peng includes a key member and socket structure, but fails to include structural limitations of the key member and socket as set forth in claims 4-7,10,11,25,27,30, and 31. Castaneda discloses another type of device that is used to stabilize instruments during heart surgery. Castaneda illustrates many different embodiments of a stabilization means between a shaft and a collar. In Figure 45, the shaft (1402) includes a key member (1420) with multiple protrusions extending radially from the central body. The collar (1428) includes a ledge and multiple walls (1460). The ledge prevents translational movement of the shaft, and the walls (1460) prevent rotational movement of the shaft (1402). The socket of the collar (1418) includes an aperture for passage of the shaft (1402). Regarding the limitation "integrally formed" of claim 11, Castaneda explains that the shaft can be glued to the disc, or "key member" (column 18, lines 65-67). The socket is capable of engaging the key member in more than one direction, as the protrusions have the same shape. Castaneda teaches that the structure of the key member and collar in Figure 45 provides a stabilization force to the key member (1420), thereby preventing movement of the shaft (1402) (column 20, lines 57-61). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to substitute the ball joint of Peng with a key member and socket structure, as Castaneda teaches that this is an alternate way to provide a stabilization force to a shaft of an instrument used in heart surgery.

Art Unit: 3731

Conclusion

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. US 6,346,077 (Taylor et al.) discloses a manipulator device with various types of coupling mechanisms (esp. Figure 51B). US 6,387,047 (Duhaylongsod et al.) discloses a retractor assembly that includes a key member on a shaft that engages a socket in a collar (Figures 10-13).
